What are Natural Burial Grounds?

Natural Burial Grounds are for people who want their passing to bring some benefit to the environment.

The Golden Valley Woodland Burial Ground is managed to promote the development of animal life and meadow flowers, and to restore the species diversity that has been lost from our countryside over the past fifty years.

On some of the plots, a native shrub is planted to mark the grave and this is fed by the nutrients from your body.

Instead of causing yet more harmful greenhouse gases and using valuable fuel resources, as happens with cremation, goodness is fed back into the soil to support regeneration.

And wildflower seed stock can be sown to encourage the type of meadowland that has virtually disappeared from the region.

In what ways is a Natural Burial Ground different?

Natural Burial Grounds look different to other types of cemeteries.

The Golden Valley Woodland Burial Ground has been described as the most beautiful cemetery in the area. The natural beauty of an evolving meadowed woodland.

To maintain the natural appearance of the landscape, gravestones are laid low to the ground and only made from natural stone or wood. Grass is 'topped' just a couple of times a year, so as not to disturb the growth of the developing meadowland.

In fact, every step is taken to encourage wildlife and plant life.

Are there any special rules that apply to the type of coffin that I use?

No. The choice is yours.

More and more people are now choosing to be buried in environmentally friendly coffins such as willow, bamboo, banana leaf, cardboard and wool coffins. Some people even choose to be buried in a burial shroud rather than a coffin. But even if you want a more traditional coffin, then we respect that choice.

Is it possible to be cremated and have my ashes interred in the Golden Valley Woodland Burial Ground?

Some people have personal, cultural or religious reasons, for wanting to be cremated, yet still want to make a lasting contribution to the environment. You can have your ashes interred at the Golden Valley Woodland Burial Ground.

Each ashes plot is for two sets of ashes and is half the size of a full burial plot. You can also have a stone plaque marker on an ashes plot.

Is there anything else that is special about the Golden Valley Woodland Burial Ground?

Yes. This Woodland Burial Ground is absolutely unique in that it is the only one in the country that is passed by steam train. Set in a tranquil corner of the Butterley Country Park, the burial ground is truly special.

And as well as bringing benefits to the environment, every burial here also helps the Midland Railway Centre, the preservation group committed to maintaining the traditions of our glorious steam heritage.

What are the costs?

In line with Peace Funerals' philosophy of promoting funeral choice, families are allowed to select where their loved one's plot is to be, within a limited choice of available plots. You have the choice of having a plot with a shrub, or a plot with wildflowers planted.

The costs for the full burial plots and grave digging are as follows:

Single Burial plot— Tree £1800

(includes tree and a stone tablet with a maximum of 65 characters)

Interment (grave digging) costs £900

Double Burial plot—Shrub £1100

(includes shrub and a stone tablet with a maximum of 65 characters)

Interment (grave digging) costs £900

Double Burial plot – Wildflower £950

(includes a stone tablet with a maximum of 65 characters)

Interment (grave digging) costs £900

For ashes, there is only one type of plot. These can accommodate two sets of ashes and a shrub is planted on the plot at the time of the first burial of ashes. The costs for the ashes plots and the interment are as follows:

Double Ashes Shrub plot £600

(includes shrub and a stone tablet with a maximum of 65 characters)

Ashes interment (each interment) from £175

Can I reserve a place in the Golden Valley Woodland Burial Ground?

Yes. In fact, it makes a lot of sense to purchase rights to a burial plot in advance. It relieves your loved ones of an extra pressure at their time of loss. And it helps you to avoid the effects of inflation. (At the time of burial, a fee will be charged for digging the grave. This charge is currently £900 for full burial and £175 for burial of ashes).
